

Thoughts from some actors:

"Learn from the others, not only from the coaches, but from the other travellers, and meet new people. Learn something. Like really learn something. I want to be better in what I like."

Karolina Grzegorzewicz, performer

"I believe that it's the human being that sets the borders and lines. Talking about Europe, inside and outside: I think that's already the problem. I would rather talk about Earth."

Iga Lukman, performer

"For me, the piece is about humanity and how we make the same mistakes in different ways and we don't learn from our previous mistakes. So we start together, fear and hatred drive us apart. We go to the big structure, and then we split hierarchically. For me, it's about how humans keep making the same divisions and mistakes in that sense, just in different ways. First it's moving away from each other, then it's making some people more important than other."

Rosalind Chaston, performer

"It's also about how we build our society right now. I think right now we are at a point where something is going to collapse. There is a lot of division in the world right now, both in politics and in culture."

Lea Emilia Christensen, performer

"I'm a hip-hop dancer. For me, it's everything. All my friends are on this. It's my environment."

Sofia "Sonya" Poguts, performer

"I think there is hope. I can see it here."

Johnny Cejas Montero, performer

"It really surprised me that everyone is sort of the same. I thought the cultural differences would be bigger than they are. I don't really know why, but I was expecting it."

Jiska Mensink, performer

"I really like hip-hop from when I was young. We would do rap and dancing. I really liked it before joining this project. It means a freedom of doing things, and also of expressing. Not only from the mouth, it can happen also with dancing."

Abdirahman "Jordan" Nuur, performer

"We're all coming from different countries all over Europe. We want to show that, even though we're from different cultures and countries, we can still do something like this big project. We're crossing these stereotypes, this line, interacting with each other."

Kien Thien, performer

"We just cross the lines, our lines, and all the limits are defeated. "

Mihail "MiŞu" Vass, performer
